J. FENIMORE COOPER'S LIFE.—[Constance Fenimore in the December Harper.]—Resigning his position in the navy, Mr. Cooper, at the age of twenty-two, married Miss Susan De Lancey, sister of the Bishop of Western New York; and now that twenty years are passed since the graves of husband and wife were made in the little churchyard under the pines, comment may be permitted, and with the more freedom since, sooner or later, the lives of eminent men must necessarily become the property of the public. Among the sad heart-histories which the biographies of men of genius are almost sure to reveal, the charming love-story of Fenimore Cooper and his wife shines out with pure radiance, an ideal picture of a happy marriage. A lovely, accomplished woman, Mrs. Cooper was blessed with the unchanging, tender devotion of her husband through forty long years; and even in death they were not separated, for within four months after the husband's departure his gentle wife followed him, a fit resident for that heaven for which her whole life had been one constant preparation. Mrs. Cooper was retiring and feminine in every movement, word, and action. Her strong, impetuous husband—massive and vigorous in frame, decided and independent in action—yielded to her a chivalrous devotion most beautiful and rare. She was his preferred companion above all others, and in his daily drives to his mountain farm, called the Chalet, he always wanted her by his side, while in the evening his favorite amusement was to sit on the porch with his wife as his attendant. Although the children grew up around them, although the hospitable mansion was often filled with distinguished and delightful guests, although time passed and they grew old, the husband and wife never sank into the mere father and mother, but to the last they cherished for each other that fresh affection which is so seldom seen after the bloom of youth and the charm of novelty have passed away. The fair, gentle woman who hovered over Cooper's pages, happily occupied in her own quiet sphere, was content to follow the old-fashioned rule of the Bible, that "the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the Church, in everything."

After his marriage Mr. Cooper lived for some time at Scarsdale, in Westchester county, and here he wrote his first story, "Precaution," a tale of English life. He was reading an English novel aloud to his wife, when suddenly he threw down the book and exclaimed, "I believe I could write a better myself." Following the impulse he immediately composed a few chapters and read them to Mrs. Cooper, who encouraged him in the work, and urged him to publish it when completed, although at this time he had no intention of appearing before the public. The manuscript, however, was at length submitted to the late Charles Wilke, and, meeting with his approval, was published in 1820, winning favorable notice both in this country and England, and showing signs of that genius which, when employed upon a more congenial and original subject, gained for the author such triumphant success. In 1821 Mr. Cooper published the "Spy," which was immediately and brilliantly successful, being the first spirited story of our Revolutionary war, and thus opening a new era in American literature. The "Spy" has been translated into all the languages of Europe, and even crossed the borders into Asia, a Persian version having appeared in 1847, at Isfahan.

From 1821 until his death, a period of thirty years, Mr. Cooper published no less than thirty-nine volumes, thirty-two being novels—an amount of mental and physical labor which justly entitles him to be called a hard-working man; for although he sometimes employed his daughters as amanuenses, still the work of composing and preparing even one book for the press is arduous, as any doubter will find if he tries it.

In recalling the number of volumes that the author's pen produced it might naturally be supposed that his whole time was devoted to writing; but instead of this, he had many other occupations. Rising early in the morning, he generally accomplished his writing before breakfast, which took place at nine, devoting the hours of the middle of the day to his mountain farm, the Chalet, where he found out-door recreation in an obstinate contest with the stony soil, he being determined that the crops should grow, and the mountain being determined that they should not; it is said that the mountain won the day, since, during all the years of the contest, the farm only paid its expenses once! The relaxation obtained in this way, however, was heartily enjoyed by Mr. Cooper, and no doubt this constant communion with nature and this vigorous open-air exercise contributed to preserve the healthy, manly tone so conspicuous in his writings.

OLD RECORDS.—"The records of the general court, which embraced deeds and other documents relating to Virginia from the earliest period of her history, and when territorially she embraced within her limits Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia and other States, were all destroyed when the State courthouse was consumed by fire on the memorable 3d of April, 1865. The records bore date even anterior to the settlement at James Town, and their value as historical memoranda cannot be computed. In the earlier books one could see what provisions the Colonists were in the habit of making them for the danger constantly threatening them from the murderous inroads of the 'Savage Indians'; and how they proposed to circumvent the 'pyrate Kiddle,' who was expected in Chesapeake bay on hostile incursions sundry times.

The oldest existing records in the city are perhaps to be found in the General Land office of Virginia. These date from 1623. The first grant of land in these books is made by Sir Francis Wyatt, Governor and Captain General of Virginia, "with the consent of the Council of State" to one Richard Stephens, and conveyed certain land in "James City," which land, as the grant goes on to say, "lyeth South upon the bay along the great river," (noble James) and was made for his "better containing that others may be the more encouraged by his example to build and enclose some ground about their houses for gardening and planting and other profitable uses." This land grant is dated July, 1623. "In the sixteenth year of this Plantation," according to the Virginia was settled first in 1607. The name originated, however, in the year 1584, soon after the return of Sir Walter Raleigh's first expedition to the "New World."—Rich. Whig.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR.
The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, sometimes in general costive, sometimes alternating with laxity, with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most involved. Cure the liver and you cure the rest.

LIVER REGULATOR.

MEDICAL.

Baltimore Lock Hospital.
DR. JOHNSTON,
Physician of this celebrated institution, has discovered the most Certain, Speedy, Pleasant and Effectual Remedy in the world for all DISEASES OF IMPURITUDE.

Weakness of the Back or Limbs, Stricture, Affection of the Kidneys or Bladder, Involuntary Discharges, Impotency, General Debility, Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Langour, Low Spirits, Confusion of Ideas, Palpitation of the Heart, Trembling, Dimness of Sight, or Giddiness, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin, Affections of the Liver, Lungs, Stomach or Bowels—these and a host of other ailments from Solitary Habits of Youth—secret and solitary practices more fatal to their victims than the songs of the Sirens to the Mariners of Ulysses, blighting their most brilliant hopes or anticipations, &c.

YOUNG MEN.
Especially, who have become the Victims of Solitary Vice, and dreadful and destructive habits which annually sweep to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most educated talents and brilliant intellect, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstasy the living lyre, may call with full confidence.</
